The MIC seminar in Singapore took place on 15 September at NTU. Emails have been sent to different schools of universities, polytechnics and industrial partners to inform them about the seminar and the contest. There are about 30 attendants present for the seminar. They are mostly engineering students (both undergraduate and postgraduate) and research engineers (both academic institution and industry). Many are quite enthusiastic about the potential application of nano-satellite mission and its future role. Some of them have expressed their interests to participate in the contest.
